

I am an Italian man who has lived in different cities in Italy.

My childhood city was ████████ where I studied and I gained my Master's degree in Civil Engineering. The city offered me very little to have a good life style and after 3 years of my degree I decided to move to Milan. Milan was a fashionable city for me; also I am a great supporter of AC Milan. After a few months I found a good job in the renewable energy and I worked for two important companies. However, I couldn't find love and friends in Milan and I became a little sad.

In 2013 the crisis came to my company and most of the workers were made redundant, so we had to work to research a new business and a new challenge. I always liked London and after a few months I came ████████ to find my job and study to improve my English. I like the British people and I like to drink in the pub in moderation. I am not a smoker and I have never taken any drugs.

I am pretty good in Math and I am trying to be very good in English I hope.

Hello dear.

I am so happy for you. I hope you are fine and you may have the best family around you. I do not mind to meet you in the future. Possibly you look like me.

Good luck! Do not be afraid to contact me. Be happy!
