Dear Child,

It is a special moment today while you are reading this message which has been composed many years ago. Thanks to your parents who raised you to what you are now, and the clinic which helped your parents to conceive you, you are now able to receive this message.

By now, you are a grown-up independent person. I believe that it is not for me to tell you anything. I can only give you some ideas and suggestions from my side, which you might want to consider for your future.

Our world is a special place, you just have to realize it by focusing on the good aspects of it. First and foremost, be always kind and graceful to your parents, especially in their older age. Never give up with your life goals. Try to reach the heights in those things in which you are the best, the things of which only you know the best. Stay proud of yourself, while being respectful to others. And most importantly, go onto the earth and make an ever-lasting great impact!

I wish you a healthy, prosperous and wonderful life, full of joy and luck!

Sincerely yours.

Since my childhood, I had a great passion for science and technology, next to my interest for how humanity works together as a whole system. Thanks to my inner motivation, I made many achievements in my young age already, such as being good in sports and having won some athletic competitions in my city, having the chance to complete my university degree in less than half of the average time, having worked at various companies around the world and seen their professional landscape, or having had the chance to travel around the world and meet such people who are still part of my life.

My values have been continuously expanding since then. Starting from a conservative background, education and travels around the world made me soon realize the importance of love and unity of humanity. Finding the common things rather than the differences is one of my main attitudes while dealing with people and their cultures. Respect to others is one of the most fundamental values I have.

But despite all that, I firmly believe to not forget one's own special place in the world. After many years of learning by experiencing, I realized, how important it is to help people and make a long-lasting impact on the greater part of our society. Everybody is meant to be special for some certain thing, and one definitely has a higher aim in this world.
