I was born in a little town in [REDACTED] Chile from an Italian family. I spent part of my childhood in that town with my mother, my grandparents, my brother and my two sisters. However, due to my mothers' job we moved a few times in Chile, so we lived in different cities, and I went to different schools, which I enjoyed. Looking for better opportunities to study, I continued moving alone from city to city and even to different countries. That is how I ended up in London doing my PhD in Epidemiology and Public Health.

I was a very curious kid, I was good at school, I was strong headed and always looking for new things to do and learn, and fortunately I had my grandfather in my life, who supported me and helped me to achieve all my dreams. Other than studying and learning new things, I enjoy running, swimming, going to the gym and hanging out with my friends. I prefer clubs over bars because I love dancing and I don't drink much.

Even though I consider myself very friendly, I need and enjoy spending time by myself, and maybe that is the reason why I haven't had issues starting again in a new city or a new country.

What I like about myself is that I am not afraid of failure, and I believe in myself. I know that I am not the best at everything, but I am a very persevering individual, and I take the time that is needed to learn or achieve what I want.

Dear offspring,

By the time you read this message I hope you are an adult who had a lovely and happy childhood.

I decided to give to your parents the opportunity to have you because by the time I did it, I was not sure if I wanted to have children myself. Furthermore, if I wanted to be a father, as a member of the LGBT community I would need some help to do so.

Being an adult comes with a lot a new decisions and responsibilities, which can be scary at times. I would recommend that you think about how you would like your life to be and then decide the best and the most joyful way to get it. That is what I have learned from my family and my own experiences up to this stage of my life.

If one day you would like to contact me, I have no problem with you doing so. We can meet and talk, and I'm sure that will be very nice for the both of us.
