I am 5 foot 7, blond hair and blue eyes and a slim build. I grew up in [REDACTED] England and moved [REDACTED] when [REDACTED] to continue my career.

As a child I was good at the core subjects at school with Maths being my preferred class growing up. I wasn't very sporty, but I think mainly that is because I didn't enjoy football or rugby and that was played almost every week! I loved athletics and in particular the long jump, high jump and sprints. I wished to find more interesting sports that I enjoyed as an adult – indoor rock climbing, parkour and gymnastics all became part of my activities [REDACTED] I would strongly suggest getting into sports that are a little out there but insanely fun! Find out what you love and push for it. It's also not all about team sports as I have learned and one thing I believe in is pushing your own limits and beating your own personal bests, not being too worried about other people's skills. Although I loved maths and studied it at university, I found myself to be far too social and decided to pursue hospitality as a profession! The non-stop world of food, drinks and everything in between where no two days are the same. I am an operational manager [REDACTED] and hopefully will get to work internationally soon! It's been hard work but have met friends for life and shows that your studies don't need to define who you become. I love food with my favourite cuisines being Japanese or Peruvian, but when I was younger, I HATED green vegetables and wasn't very exciting when it came to meals.

I am a relaxed and centred guy, I love to see the best in any situation, I am a YES man and will usually agree to anything that gets planned for me giving me the best opportunity to see the world and experience as much as possible. I love to travel both with friends and alone, best trip has been a solo holiday to Mexico – just incredible!

I don't read as much as I would like to, but prefer dystopian novels where I can immerse myself into it with no distractions. Music is my true go to and I spend every week looking into new artists and songs to fill my life – I need music on in the background of most situations as there are always times to listen and love music. Favourite artists are Friendly Fires, Jack Garratt, Sam Fender, Flume and Bloc Party if you ever need some retro songs to listen back to (haha!).

Biggest thing in life is enjoy what you do and strive to find that in every aspect – work, relationship, living situation, activities, travels. Life is too short, so enjoy every moment.

Hey there! Congratulations on turning 16 and finding out a little more about how you came to land on this world. I truly hope that you are enjoying your teenage years despite how difficult they may seem! My drive to be a donor was to help families who despite the strongest bonds of love and devotion to each other, were not able to bring a child into the world un-aided. The least that I could do is to help families grow and share their love in the best possible way. I have no idea how you have been in the last 16 years, but if you want to reach out I am here for that. Hopefully you're not as quiet as I was at your age and you have some clear goals and ambitions in mind. I think the world is moving on so fast that acceptance and opportunities will be plentiful and you can fulfil your dreams and ambitions with ease! If you're anything like me, you have the best of your life up ahead next and you will grow confidence, self-appreciation and ambitions to become a superb young adult.
